The Decision for the Christ

When I was of age to receive confirmation and full membership of the church, I was told to choose a passage from the Bible as the expression of my personal approach to the Biblical message and to the ... church. ... When I chose the words, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden", I was asked with a kind of astonishment and even irony why I had chosen that particular passage. For I was living under happy conditions and, being only fifteen years old, was without any apparent labour and burden. I could not answer at that time; I felt a little embarrassed, but basically right. And I was right, indeed; every child is right in responding immediately to those words; every adult is right in responding to them in all periods of his life, and under all the conditions of his internal and external history. These words of Jesus are universal, and fit every human being and every human situation. They are simple; they grasp the heart of the primitive as well as that of the profound, disturbing the mind of the wise. Practically every word of Jesus had this character, sharing the difference between Him as the originator and the dependent interpreters, disciples and theologians, saints and preachers. Returning for the first time in my life to the passage of my early choice, I feel just as grasped by it as at that time, but infinitely more embarrassed by its majesty, profundity, and inexhaustible meaning.

Things to remember:

Our last 5th Sunday of 2016 is coming up this month. The contribution on these 4 Sunday's will be used to pay off our debt early, benevolent initiatives to help those in need and general checking to pay our bills. Please pray about it, plan for it and support it. God is good. There will be a fellowship meal following Sunday morning service.

This week we are collecting microwavable ravioli for the Henderson County High School backpacks. Please contribute if possible.

Nobody can go back and make a new beginning or undo anything that has been done. But we can always start again at the present moment, correct things that are wrong and start doing what is right and make a brand new ending.

The church directory is almost ready to print. If there have been any changes in your profile since you filled out the directory sheet, please contact Marie Henshaw with the updated information.

Last week, after preaching about the “Fear of the Lord” a friend posted the sermon title on his Facebook page, and a young lady asked him, “Fear? Why fear?” When he posted the sermon notes he had taken, she responded by saying, “I’m sorry I asked! That’s extremely sad to me. I will never fear my god.”

This is the mentality of your average 21st century believer. Everything is love, and if everything is not love, then it is wrong. Should we be surprised that the dominant expression of tolerance in today’s world is “Love Wins”?

Here’s the hard truth: Love doesn’t always win. The Bible teaches that we are to teach the truth, in love. So if we have love, but not truth, there is no victory.

When so-called Christian people adopt half of the gospel, the result is a self-directed religion in which nobody can instruct me on my own righteousness, nobody is called out for their sin, and nobody feels an obligation to work for the Kingdom.

When we’ve only bought into the love and grace of God, there is no accountability in any area of my life, because it’s my own, and nobody else’s business.

The amazing thing about the fear of the Lord is that it is a quality we desire. It’s not a quality to fear in itself. The fear of the Lord is simply the proper perspective of God’s holiness that keeps me from violating that relationship.

One thing it doesn’t do, however, is sell well with the public. Sometimes there are things that need to be heard which aren’t entirely comforting, but they’re necessary.

In Jeremiah’s day, the false prophets taught whatever the people wanted to hear, and the people would eat it up. Then Jeremiah would speak the truth, and everyone looked around at each other and said, “Can we get rid of this guy?” May we never be afraid to speak the truth, In love, regardless of whether it’s popular or not.
